Based on her residence, supervision was transferred to the Probation Office from the Eastern District of New York. They have concentrated their efforts on enrolling Glass at the Mount Sinai St. Luke's Center for Intensive Treatment of Personality Disorders where she would receive specialized treatment as well as substance abuse treatment if deemed necessary. She was accepted to their program on October 8, 2014, however, was resistant claiming it was too intensive, too far, and too time consuming. Glass attended three of nine scheduled appointments before being discharged on October 16, 2015.

The offender then commenced mental health treatment at the Interborough Development and Consultation Center. Glass secured this treatment on her own accord. The center is not similar to the type of treatment the Court recommended at the violation hearing. According to the treatment provider, it is not an intensive program, nor does it provide a substance abuse component. She receives two individual sessions per week and one psychiatric session for medication monitoring. Glass has Medicaid which covers the cost of mental health treatment at Interborough Developmental and Consultation Center (IDCC). Glass has signed the confidential release forms, however, they have been cooperative with providing information as requested. She attended her initial assessment at IDCC on 10/29/14. The supervising officer has made a request for an updated report from Glass' therapist at IDCC, and it is awaited. Additionally she is being referred to one of the contracted agencies for substance abuse assessment and treatment, if deemed necessary.
